1988 ADA VOTING RECORD

ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT

By Marc Pearl, ADA National Director

Americans for Democratic Action, Inc. presents the 41st annual edition of the longest running interest group rating of the U.S. Congress. Since 1947, ADA's "Liberal Quotient" Voting Record has been used to measure how well our Senators and Representatives support civil rights, family rights, workers rights, health care, social & economic justice, reproductive freedom, arms control, peace, and democracy.

Inside you will find our comprehensive breakdown detailing how each member voted on the critical issues facing our nation during the 2nd session of the 100th Congress. This year we looked at 20 different votes in each chamber.

THE END OF THE REAGAN "ERROR"

Liberals were gratuitously beat up on during the presidential campaign, yet the 100th Congress presented those who support the economic, peace and social justice agenda with numerous victories.

In spite of eight continuous years of berating the liberal programs meant to help families, workers, the elderly and children, Congress regained the initiative with each succeeding session and consistently resisted the temptation to roll over and play dead. Even as the great communicator maintained his high poll ratings and tried to convince the American public: "Don't worry, be happy," vetoes were overturned, gains were made on economic justice issues, and a significant omnibus trade bill containing plant closing notification provisions passed over former Senator Dan Quayle's floor leadership objections.

But Congress still seemed to lack a backbone in the face of election year politics. In spite of authorization for the first ever comprehensive research, education, and treatment of AIDS, Sen. Jesse Helms' (R-NC) threatened filibuster forced the Congress to jettison testing confidentiality.

Reproductive freedom supporters suffered a setback when Congress retreated from expanding abortion provisions in appropriation legislation to include rape and incest with the woman's life being threatened.

The momentum gained by the overwhelming rejection of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court in 1987 soon subsided; and in spite of ADA's opposition, Congress failed to challenge and later confirmed Reagan nominee Anthony Kennedy, who showed his true colors by casting the decisive 5th vote to reopen settled law from the 1976 civil rights Runyon case.

In 1988 Congress also showed reluctance to deal with a wide range of issues including:

- South African sanctions, defense procurement reform, campaign finance reform, universal voter registration, parental leave, increasing the minimum wage, reforming the Walter-McCarren Act, hate crimes statistics, childcare, pay equity, and long-term health care.

Though Congress rejected providing lethal military aid to the contras, it did, however, vote to restore non-lethal military aid.

But there were also many bright spots in an otherwise less than historic 100th Congressional session. After 8 years of promises and false starts, strong enforcement procedures were finally added to the Fair Housing Law. Though the Reagan administration continuously tried to turn the clock back to the nadir of the 1950's, Congress successfully thwarted this action by passing the Civil Rights Restoration Act.

The Ethics in Government Act was expanded to tighten lobby restrictions on former members of Congress and high-level congressional staffers, but suffered a pocket veto by Reagan at the close of the session. The President also vetoed the Whistleblower's Protection Act even though the White House had given Republican and Democratic leaders assurance of support.

Ronald Reagan was forced to accept a military budget increase tied to the rate of inflation. The Senate passed the INF Treaty, but insured continuity of interpretation by holding future administrations to the definitions presented during the Congressional hearings by White House officials.

The ball of further progress is certainly in the Bush court in 1989. George Bush will confront a 101st Congress ready and willing to do battle, on the full range of social issues; particularly since he campaigned as a supporter of education, child care, and the environment.

We fully expect the "Liberal Quotient" to remain at its high levels, despite the rhetoric during the campaign. The most "liberal" candidate for Senate majority leader was overwhelmingly selected by his peers. The House ADA rating rose once again, and together with the Senate, the "Liberal Quotient" surpassed 51%.

Liberals are poised to recapture the initiative, redefine the mission, and rekindle the progressive flame of activism in 1989.

ADA TODAY

OBTAINING THE "LIBERAL QUOTIENT"

The votes selected this year by an ADA committee cover the full spectrum of domestic, foreign, economic, military and social issues. We tried to select votes which display sharp liberal/conservative divisions. In many instances we have chosen procedural votes: amendments, motions to table, and votes on rules for debate since they seem to reveal true attitudes obscured in the final vote.

This Voting Record should be reviewed as merely one factor in evaluating the legislative performance of U.S. Senators and Representatives. It does not measure constituent service, work in committees, the degree of responsibility or leadership exhibited by the member, or other votes you personally may deem important beyond those we have chosen to highlight. These judgments cannot be expressed in mere percentages alone, and require careful scrutiny.

ABOUT ADA, INC.

AMERICANS FOR DEMOCRATIC ACTION, INC. is the oldest and most influential liberal political action group in the country. Since our founding in 1947, ADA has played a pivotal role in setting forth a progressive, economically just and socially conscious agenda for all Americans. This is the 41st consecutive year the "Liberal Quotient" Voting Record of the U.S. Congress has been published. The ADA rating has always served as the touchstone of American political thought and direction, differentiating liberal-conservative trends among the individual members of Congress.

In addition to this Voting Record ADA publishes other reference materials, sponsors seminars, and most importantly seeks to inform and motivate a more politically involved constituency. Through our tax-exempt Education Fund we seek to educate the public on the crucial issues of the day. We urge you to join us in achieving our goals.
